Designated Funds Increase by $1.3 Million

“Accept the challenges, so that you may feel the exhilaration of victory.”

General George S. Patton

General Patton might not have worn our logo on his sleeve, but he would have appreciated the effort it symbolized. When the Kirkpatrick Challenge ended in December, it took a few days for the dust to settle at the Community Foundation's office. The kickoff in October set off a multitude of mini-cyclones that, in this instance, produced some fine results. The final tally: 112 non-profit organizations raised $665,412. When the Kirkpatricks matched that amount in January, a total of $1.3 million was added to the Designated Funds at the Oklahoma City Community Foundation.

Designated Funds help non-profit organizations attract and manage endowment fund support for a steady yearly source of income. Over 200 organizations have Designated Funds at the Community Foundation. The most recent challenge, the third in the Foundation's 25-year history, was issued to those with funds valued at less than $50,000. The $1.3 million total represents a 60 per cent increase in the Designated Fund level of those non-profits that participated. Inside this newsletter is a list of organizations and the amounts they raised.

Here are some participants' comments collected by Betty Huckabay, who coordinated the Challenge:

Linda Rodriguez, St. James School: "If it were not for the matching funds challenge, I doubt that our contributions for the past two years would have been as high as they are."

Darcie Harris, Contact, a 24-hour telephone helpline: "Contact's Designated Fund at the Community Foundation represents much more than the face value of the account. It represents the hope of a financially secure future."

Micki Payne, Infant Crisis Services: "Over 30,000 babies and toddlers have been provided the basic necessities of life over the last nine years through the efforts of Infant Crisis Services, Inc. The Kirkpatrick Challenge increased our donor base as well as the dollar amounts given."

Parents of a girl with a learning difference, Payne Education Center: "Through her work with her Alphabetic Phonics instructor, she has made remarkable progress and developed an awareness that she can learn. We donated to the endowment fund with the belief that if this program were available to all children, regardless of learning styles, each would have an opportunity to maximize their potential for success."

Elaine Miller, Sugar Creek Camp: "For the past two years, friends of Sugar Creek Camp have responded

About the Oklahoma City Community Foundation

Since 1969 the Oklahoma City Community Foundation has helped donors accomplish their personal charitable goals and assisted non-profit organizations through grants and endowment fund support.

The Foundation is governed by nine trustees who represent a broad range of community organizations and interests. A separate fiscal committee composed of officers from three different banks invests and manages the Foundation's assets.

The Foundation's staff works with the Board of Trustees, the Fiscal Committee, donors and charitable organizations. They administer the asset base and seek out ways to fill needs in the community.

For the fiscal year that ended June 30, 1993, the Foundation's assets were valued at $81 million. During the year, more than 250 charitable organizations received grants and distributions from endowment earnings of $2.9 million.

Through the Foundation, donors can provide ongoing support for specific institutions or general causes by advising the staff and Trustees of their wishes. By donating money to the Fund for Oklahoma City, their contributions can be used at the Trustees' discretion to support needs in the community as they arise.

A gift to the Oklahoma City Community Foundation is a lasting gift to the community.

New Name Funds

First Lieutenant
Felix Christopher
McKean

On January 12, 1944, Army Air Corps First Lieutenant Felix Christopher McKean was killed in action at the age of 24. Fifty years later, his sister Mary Meier walked in the front door of the Community Foundation's office with a check in hand to set up a fund named for him.

McKean received his commission on December 8, 1941, the day following the attack on Pearl Harbor. He died while serving as navigator-bombardier on a B-26, downed by German fire while returning to its Sardinia base after a mission over the Appian Way. He had volunteered for combat duty when casualties in his outfit approximated 100 per cent.

McKean was born March 9, 1919 in Lockesburg, Arkansas, the son of David Felix and Christina Moore McKean. He graduated from the University of Arkansas in 1940 with a major in foreign languages and a minor in business and mathematics. A dreamer dwelt within him; his sister Mary remembers he enjoyed writing poetry so much that his mother sometimes worried he would not get around to making plans for the rest of his life. At our request, Mary chose one of his poems to share with us, part of which follows:

*Life is an eager flame, yearning to try
Time's wick to the uttermost - its fate is to die.
Death comes with soft-drawn breath, wan and dim ghost,
Breathes lightly, so sweetly . . . Proud life ends its boast,
Burnt out on the altar of mortality.
Life is a flame.*

Every spring now, a poetry award is made to a student at the University of Arkansas from a fund established by McKean's mother. His sister has asked that the earnings from Felix McKean's name fund at the Community Foundation be used to help veterans in the Oklahoma City area. "We want them to know someone cares," she said.

"As a little kid, I remember working in her flower garden," said Joe Andrash. "My mother was a working woman, and flowers were a simple delight for her. Her work put my sister and me through college. Later when we were grown, she concentrated on her garden. When I gave her gifts, I always gave flowers - the kind she could plant outside."

In memory of his mother, Joe Andrash established The Wildflower Name Fund at the Community Foundation, to fund planting fields of wildflowers. He contacted Carl Busch, manager of the Prudential Securities Office here and newly arrived from Austin where Lady Bird Johnson had started the first wildflower program. Busch and Andrash are both serving on the board of Oklahoma City Beautiful, and share a commitment to wildflowers and beautification. Busch also made a generous corporate contribution to the fund Andrash had started.

Earnings from The Wildflower Fund now support the planting of wildflowers along the East shoreline of Lake Hefner Trails. "Everyone likes wildflowers," Andrash said. "We are planting smiles. Little things, inch by inch, can change things and make them better. The good feelings and feedback I have gotten since establishing the fund are an unexpected present to me."

to the Kirkpatrick Challenge and, in addition to their regular year-end gifts, have gone the extra mile to support Sugar Creek Camp's endowment fund. Through this unique giving opportunity, many Oklahoma City children living in poverty will learn that our community is a caring community, and from that knowledge they will learn to trust others and to believe in themselves."

Many thanks to John and Eleanor Kirkpatrick.
